Scope and Content of Collection

Acquired in 2004, with a substantial increment received in 2005, the Iris Chang papers in the Hoover Institution Archives span the career of a prominent American writer whose work centered on topics of Chinese and Chinese-American history.

Chang's 1997 book The Rape of Nanking: The Forgotten Holocaust was an enormous popular success, focusing renewed attention on the actions of the Imperial Japanese army in China in the late 1930s and transforming Chang herself into a public figure who gave numerous speeches on the subject of her book. In the process, she became identified as an advocate who sought both to preserve the memory of the Nanking Massacre and to force a greater recognition on the part of Japan of its role in this tragedy.

Chang's other books include The Thread of the Silkworm, a biography of the Chinese rocket scientist Hsue Shen Tsien, and The Chinese in America: A Narrative History, a major work on the Chinese-American experience based on extensive research and interviews.

The Iris Chang papers include a large amount of research materials used in the preparation of her three books. These are comprised of interview transcripts, notes, documents, sound recordings, and videorecordings. The collection also contains published articles from Iris Chang's career as a journalist, as well as significant biographical materials.
