Historical Note

Polish legation with the Czechoslovak government-in-exile in London during World War II.

Scope and Content Note

The records of the Polish legation to the Czechoslovak government in London are the only extant ones of this diplomatic post, and document the wartime relationship of those two governments. The bulk of the material dates from 1941 to 1945 and is almost entirely devoted to the idea of creating a confederation between Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Poland had suspended diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia after the latter's annexation by Germany in March 1939, but re-established contact the following year on French soil, where leaders of both countries had regrouped after the outbreak of the war. With the fall of France in June 1940, they set up governments-in-exile in London and renewed regular diplomatic relations with each other. The rapprochement between the two countries was facilitated by the fact that Wladyslaw Sikorski, long before he became prime minister in 1939, had warned Poland's ruling elites against isolationism.

The plan for a confederation was born of wartime exigency and constituted a bold step for two countries that had no history of close ties between them. In 1940, both wished to prevent, once and for all, their history of occupation and division from repeating itself. They sought not only to strengthen their security but also to create friendly relations as a guarantee of a new post-war order. One must also note that Poland, although hoping for stronger ties with other central and eastern European countries as well, considered Czechoslovakia the most important strategic partner, given that its level of industrial development was extremely high.

General Sikorski strongly supported the idea for a confederation. In addition, there were many other planners in this project who staffed committees and wrote papers, most of whom remain anonymous. Following the war, the communist regimes in Warsaw and Prague blocked the direct evolution of the confederation idea as planned in these records, but those experts involved from the beginning continued to be active well into the 1950s among the circles shaping the idea of a united Western Europe.

Other important topics in addition to the Polish-Czechoslovak confederation include the Munich Agreement, Poland's borders, Teschen Silesia, relations with the Balkan states and with the Soviet Union, the steel industry, the persecution of Jews in occupied Poland, and wartime intelligence. There are also files relating to such public figures as General Sikorski, Eduard Benes, Jan Masaryk, Stefan Osusky, Hubert Ripka.

These records were formerly part of the Poland's Foreign Ministry collection, acquired by the Hoover Archives in 1959, and were accessioned in the early 1990s as a separate collection. The legation, however, used its own classification system (given here, in a series list, both in English and Polish), different from the one used by all other Polish diplomatic posts. (For a complete listing of the index numbers in that classification system, please consult the series list of the register to the "Poland. Ministerstwo Spraw Zagranicznych" records.)

A microfilm copy of these materials has been deposited in the State Archives of Poland in Warsaw.
