Committee History

Transportation has been an important issue for the state legislature since its beginning in 1850. Until 1945, jurisdiction over transportation was broken down into different elements and managed by different committees that have since come and gone. These Assembly committees included Roads and Highways, Commerce and Navigation, Motor Vehicles, Aviation and Air Craft, Common Carriers, and Public Works, State Capitol and Parks. In 1945, the State Assembly unified the jurisdictions into one committee: the Assembly Committee on Transportation and Commerce.

At the end of World War II, the State Assembly recognized the increase in affluence and commerce in America. The Assembly stated "transportation and commerce in the postwar world [would] create and intensify many conditions which [would] require legislation." In order to address these conditions in transportation and commerce, the State Assembly created the Transportation and Commerce Committee with House Resolution 274 in 1945 (Assembly Journal, June 9, 1945, p. 3995).

Five Assembly members were assigned to the committee, one serving as chair and another as vice chair. It was the responsibility of this newly founded committee to "ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relating to the transportation of persons and goods and the problems of commerce" (Assembly Journal, June 9, 1945, p. 3995). This included ascertaining, studying and analyzing: the adequacy of California's waterways and roadways, devices and the equipment associated with transportation, hazards and inefficiencies of traffic, and the administration of all state and local agencies that in any way affect the operation, administration, enforcement or revision of the streets and highways, harbors and navigation and vehicle codes.

The Transportation and Commerce Committee functioned as a standing committee when the legislature was in session. During this time the committee focused on reviewing current bills and making recommendations to the Assembly. When the legislature was not in session the Transportation and Commerce Committee reverted to an interim committee. The interim committee was comprised of the same members as the standing committee but their objective was different. Instead of focusing on specific legislation, as they would during the regular session, the Interim Transportation and Commerce Committee would concentrate on identifying and examining problems and weaknesses in California transportation.

Because of the large scope of issues the committee oversaw, the number of members assigned to the committee quickly rose from the original five. In 1946, 13 assembly members were assigned to the committee. In 1947, 16 members were assigned to the committee. Over the next 12 years, the membership fluctuated some but was generally held in the low to mid teens.

In 1969, pursuant to House Resolution 21, a reorganization of the Assembly's committee jurisdictions occurred. In 1968, the Assembly had 23 committees. That was paired down to 21 in 1969 with substantial changes to the names and jurisdictions of the committees. The Assembly Committee on Transportation and Commerce dropped the Commerce and became simply the Assembly Committee on Transportation. Jurisdiction over commerce was given to the Public Utilities and Corporations Committee.

The new Committee on Transportation had 10 members appointed to it, one serving as chair and another serving as vice chair. The committee no longer had jurisdiction over the problems of commerce but there was plenty to cover with the transportation of people and goods and all the problems that came along with that. The committee's scope expanded to explicitly include aviation as part of their jurisdiction whereas before it had not.

The Assembly Committee on Transportation remains the same today in jurisdiction and administration as at its inception in 1969, with the only change being the number of members appointed to the committee. Now there are 14 members up from the original 10. The subjects of concern are much the same as they have been. Automobile safety, pollution and smog, fuels, and traffic congestion remain as central concerns to the Assembly Committee on Transportation as they were at the committee's inception.

The chairpersons of this committee from 1954-2006 were as follows:

Hobbie, Don (Rep.), 1954-1955 (deceased during 1955 session)

Scope and Content

The Assembly Transportation Committee records consist of 116 cubic feet of records reflecting the committee's activities, along with those of its antecedents, in studying and analyzing transportation related legislation as well as general transportation issues.

The bulk of the collection consists of bill files, which date from 1968 through 2004. Second in size to the bill files are the hearing files, which make up a substantial portion of the collection, covering 1956-1987. The collection's large volume and date range of hearing files, both from the transportation standing, interim, and subcommittees, provide researchers with clear insight into the concerns and issues being addressed by the committee and its antecedents throughout their history.

Transportation is an integral part of California culture and American society. The legislation addressed and passed with the recommendation of this committee has the potential to affect large industries and government agencies as well as private businesses and citizens.

The remainder of the collection includes subject files, reports, and correspondence (see series descriptions for complete list of dates). These first two series can provide researchers with an idea of the wide range of agencies, boards, commissions, industries, and legal codes that interact with the Transportation Committee and the level of influence the committee has on each of these entities. Some organizations the Assembly Transportation Committee works closely with include the California Air Resources Board, California Energy Commission, California Highway Patrol, California Department of Transportation (CalTrans), California Transportation Commission, Department of Motor Vehicles, various transportation districts, and the trucking industry.

The correspondence in this collection consists of the Chair's correspondence. These files shed a light on the scope of issues the committee addresses and the constituents, both large and small, well-organized groups and concerned individuals, the committee aims to serve.

The records reflect the close involvement of the committee on a variety of important subjects. They document the committee's involvement in and continuing commitment to mass transportation, its efforts to combat transportation-related pollution and smog, and efforts to improve vehicle and traffic safety through regulation.

The collection also contains several relevant records pertaining to very recent issues which researchers may be interested in. One of these issues is the hands-free cell phone law. Introduced as Senate Bill 1613, this bill aims to prohibit the use of a handheld cell phone while operating a vehicle. Drivers 18 and older have the option of using a hands free device connected to their cell phone if they wish to talk while driving. The bill was enacted into law, Chapter 290, Statutes of 2006. Under SB33, drivers under 18 are restricted entirely from using a cell phone with or without a hands-free device while driving as part of their provisional license (Statutes 2007, Chapter 214)

Another recent issue is that of illegal alien drivers' licenses. Until 1993, illegal aliens were eligible for drivers' licenses in California. Governor Wilson eliminated this privilege in 1993 when he signed SB976 into law as Chapter 820, Statutes of 1993. Though some legislators have been diligently working to get legislation passed reopening the doors for illegal aliens to have a means of obtaining a drivers license, they have yet to be successful.

A final issue of current relevance is the recent increased attention in California transportation legislation to the needs of bicyclists and pedestrians. The most fundamental piece of legislation enacted regarding this increased attention was Assembly Concurrent Resolution 211 (2002). This bill, which became Resolution Chapter 120 (2002), encouraged all cities and counties to, in accordance with the California Department of Transportation and US Department of Transportation's recommendations and guidelines, integrate bicycling and walking into their transportation infrastructure. Since the passage of this resolution, several other pieces of legislation have been introduced and passed to improve the conditions for pedestrians and cyclists on the roadways.

Because of its far-reaching scope of influence on society and the role it often plays as leader in the field of transportation related solutions, the legislation assigned to Assembly Transportation Committee captures the attention of large and wide variety of groups and individuals. The interest of not only Californians, but Americans and citizens abroad in California's transportation makes these records valuable to those researching California's transportation history and to those elsewhere looking for guidance on the future of their own transportation endeavors.

Arrangement

The Assembly Transportation Committee records are arranged into five series: bill files, hearing files, subject files, reports, and correspondence. The subcommittee files follow the standing committee files and are arranged alphabetically by subcommittee name.

Arrangement

Bill files are arranged chronologically by legislative session and numerically by bill number.

Scope and Content

These bill files created by the Assembly Committee on Transportation may include all or some of the following items: bill analyses, amendments and resolutions, author's statements, testimony, press releases, newspaper clippings, background information, correspondence, roll calls, records of votes, and committee statements. Because of the size and complexity of transportation in California, the range of topics included in bills assigned to the Assembly Transportation Committee varies greatly. Some topics of particular interest and reoccurrence in recent years include cell phone regulation, Department of Motor Vehicles records confidentiality, illegal alien drivers licenses, and increased attention to bicyclists and pedestrians. Microfilm copies of bill files are available for the years 1969-1976 where indicated with MF before the LP number. Researchers should use the microfilm copies.

LP numbers

Physical Description: 334 file folders

Arrangement

Hearing files are arranged chronologically by hearing date.

Scope and Content

Hearing files include informational hearings, joint informational hearings, interim hearings and round tables. These files may contain agendas, testimony, transcripts, reports, and background material. When complete, hearing files can provide an in-depth analysis of issues of concern to the committee and California's transportation related issues. Of particular interest are the creation and management of transportation districts and rapid transit programs. Other subjects covered consistently over the history of the committee include air and noise pollution, traffic congestion, auto safety, truck regulation, fuels, and transportation financing.

All audiocassettes and videotapes have been stored separately for preservation purposes. Separation sheets are included in the files to alert researchers to the existence of tapes.

For a chronological list of hearings, see Appendix A in the master finding aid at the California State Archives.

See Appendix B for Series 3 Subject Files 1957 1967-1980 1985-1994 1996-2001

LP numbers

Physical Description: 209 file folders, 1 audiotape, and 56 videotapes.

Arrangement

Subject files are arranged alphabetically by subject heading.

Scope and Content

Subject files created by the Assembly Committee on Transportation may include administrative papers, correspondence, background materials, notes, reports, newspaper clippings, and subcommittee information. A significant portion of the subject files for the Assembly Transportation Committee records consist of administrative and legislative papers pertaining to operations, rules, and records of measure for various state and local agencies, committees, commissions, departments and districts. These papers provide insight into the inner workings of the organizations that shape California's transportation. Other subject files include Bay Area Rapid Transit and other high-speed rail systems, air pollution and smog, transportation fuels, and vehicle noise abatement.

Independent magnetic media in the form of one audiotape and 56 videotapes are included in the subject files. The tapes include information on various subjects including transportation safety, clean air, reformulated gasoline, toxic chemical transportation and spills, truck lengths, and seatbelts. These independent audio and videotapes are located separately in cold storage.

For an alphabetical list of subject headings, see Appendix B in master finding aid at the California State Archives.

See Appendix C Series 4 Reports 1968 1973-1974 1976-1977 1979-2006

Arrangement

Reports are arranged chronologically by publication date.

Scope and Content

Reports include publications by government agencies and organizations as well as independent consultants and researchers of analyses, proposals, studies, and statistical records on a variety of transportation-related subjects. Many of the published reports in this collection by government agencies and organizations were the result of legislative mandate while those published by independent consultants and researchers were done to provide the committee guidance and information on transportation topics, projects, and bills.

For a chronological list of reports, see Appendix C in master finding aid at the California State Archives.
