Scope and Content of Collection

The papers of Fred M. Hechinger, a noted journalist and expert in the field of education, are an important addition to the education collections already in the Hoover Institution Archives. They will constitute a significant source of information for students and researchers interested in the issues relating to education in the United States, from kindergarten to the college level. Fred Hechinger along with his wife, Grace Hechinger, also an author and champion of the cause of literacy, devoted a significant part of his life to writing about education, and the causes of its decline in the United States, and suggesting ways to improve it. His contributions were recognized by many educational institutions, as evident in the number of honorary degrees bestowed upon him.

The correspondence series represents Fred Hechinger's interaction with many individuals and organizations on questions of education. His opinions and observations about their research and publications were always sought after. The speeches and writings series testifies to his genuine interest and devotion to the cause of education. He was flooded with invitations to write, speak, and be interviewed. The comments and reviews of his speeches and writings bear out the level of expertise he acquired and the appreciation and acknowledgements he received from grateful fellow educators and parents. This series also includes writings jointly completed by Fred and Grace Hechinger and indicates the prominent role she played in her husband's career.

Fred Hechinger's association with various newspapers and specially with the New York Times as education ed., member of the editorial board, and finally as the president of the New York Times Foundation, is illustrated in the newspaper columns series and the New York Times and New York Times Foundation series. Together, they reveal his level of involvement in the newspaper and the role he played in the organization, the columns he wrote, the ideas and suggestions he received from his friends, admirers, and the public, and their opinions about his columns. The career file includes records of his association with different organizations and is indicative of the high regard in which he was held by his peers.

The papers of Grace Hechinger, found in a separate series, although not large in volume, are nevertheless significant, as they reflect her own interest in educational issues. Besides biographical material and correspondence, the series provides samples of her writings.
