Biography / Administrative History

Ronald A. Knox was born in Knibworth, Leicestershire on February 17, 1888 to Ellen Penelope French and the Reverend Edmund Arbuthnott Knox. After completing his formal education at Eton College and Balliol College, Oxford in 1910, Monsignor Knox was appointed as chaplain at Trinity College. Later in 1917, Ronald Knox converted to Roman Catholicism. He served as a chaplain at the University of Oxford and was later appointed as a prelate by the Pope in 1936. Monsignor Knox was a prolific writer both in religious commentaries and texts as well as literature. He translated the St. Jerome Latin Vulgate Bible into English as well as the Old and New Testament in 1944 and 1945 respectively. He wrote a number of articles with religious themes such as The Belief of Catholics and A Spiritual Aeneid. Although he only wrote six novels such as the Viaduct Murder and the Footsteps at the Lock, his writings are well known and he was a prominent member of the Detection Club.

Scope and Content of Collection

The Ronald Knox Papers is a partial collection of Monsignor Knox's writings, both published and unpublished articles, letters, broadcast transcripts, sermons, some photographs and manuscript writings originally compiled Patricia Cowan. The collection contains Ms. Cowan's notations about his writings as well as a list of his works. In addition, there are laid-in items such as postcards, letters, and articles found in the Knox books catalogued in the Oxford Collection of Special Collections at the Honnold/Mudd Library. The bulk of the collection is hand- and type-written letters by Knox and photocopies of published articles written by Monsignor Knox reproduced in journals such as The Outsider, The Tablet and newspapers such as The Sunday Times. There are a few manuscript letters and writings but much of the material is unattributed so it is unclear which items are manuscript writings. Many of the letters are from his early years while he attended Eton College and Balliol College as well as his appointment as an Anglican chaplain at Trinity College and later as a Roman Catholic chaplain at the University of Oxford. The unique items in this collection are the laid-in items from Special Collections holdings as well as the letters written by Knox.
